

MATTHEW C. REEBER

Matthew C. Reeber is an Associate with Pannone Lopes Devereaux & West LLC and is a member of the firm's Municipal Infrastructure Team. He concentrates his practice in providing legal advice to public entities involved in the construction, financing and improvement of all types of public facilities, including water and sewer projects. In addition, Mr. Reeber is also an associate in the firm's litigation group and he presently serves as lead litigation counsel to Rhode Island's largest municipal water supplier. In that capacity, Mr. Reeber has experience with multi-facet issues related to water supply, including land use, procurement laws, eminent domain proceedings, coordination between federal, state and municipal agencies and general civil litigation defense from claims arising out of the agencies' functions.

Mr. Reeber earned his J.D. from Tulane University School of Law in New Orleans, Louisiana. In addition to his law degree, Attorney Reeber also received the distinguished Admiralty Certificate from Tulane University School of Law, which is recognized as a global discipline involving all aspects of the world's maritime trades, including course work regarding marine pollution, the Clean Water Act and the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act. He received his undergraduate degree in American studies and history, cum laude, from Colby College.

Mr. Reeber is admitted to practice law in Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts, and was recognized as a Rising Star in the 2012 edition of New England Super Lawyers magazine featuring outstanding young lawyers, a distinction that recognizes the top 2.5 percent of New England lawyers under the age of 40 or those in practice for 10 years or less.